DANIEL WEBSTER'S DEBTS.

The Troubles of an Improvident Statesman.

The Boston Herald publishes a communication from a person who has discovered an old desk of Daniel Webster's, containing a lot of hitherto unpublished letters and business documents. The writer says:

The table at which this is written is about 33 inches long, 30 in height and 25 in width, and contains two drawers without locks. On it stands an office desk, 29 inches in height and 11 in width. This contains a dozen or more pigeon holes, half a dozen drawers of different dimensions, four upright receptacles adapted for docket and account books, and a well with a lock, suitable for the security of valuables against ordinary inspection only. Besides the desk, and broken-off the ledges, stands the former cover, which was locked at the top at the pleasure of the owner, or let down in front to form a writing table. The whole affair is battered and ink stained, indicating long occupancy and much work. Standing now in the upper hall of an old mansion which has been occupied by four generations, it would seem to speak of rural magistracy and the farm accounts. I had already become familiar with it, when my host said, "The desk where you sit so much was long the property of Daniel Webster, and used in his office in Boston. In those pigeon holes you will find many of his letters and papers, which you may freely examine and make what use of you like."

Mr. H., now deceased many years, with whom my friend was connected by marriage, sprang from a New Hampshire family, and began the study of law in 1822, with Ezekiel Webster, at Boscawen, N. H.

It is well known that Daniel Webster, graduating at Dartmouth in 1801, studying law at Salisbury, N. H., with M. Thompson, keeping school at Fryeburg, Me., in 1802, entering the office of Christopher Gore in Scollay's building in 1804, was, in March, 1805, admitted to practice, on Mr. Gore's motion. In the same spring he opened an office at Boscawen, to be near his father, remaining it after his death until Ezekiel was ready to relieve him. On his father's death he assumed the payment of his debts, the care of his mother's family, and the management of the farm. In the active discharge of these duties Ezekiel succeeded him, and they remained joint owners of the farm until after Ezekiel's death, in 1829, when Daniel became sole proprietor. The nucleus of business Daniel had gathered, became the foundation of success for Ezekiel, who, remaining at Boscawen, became "prominent as an advocate" and "practiced with diligence and success." In 1808, Mr. Webster wrote from Portsmouth, "My business in Boscawen was tolerable. Saturday, I got my office swept and my books put away." He says nothing about the office furniture, but George Ticknor Curtis writes of his surroundings there: "His office was a common, ordinary-looking room, with less furniture and more books than common. He had a small inner room opening from the larger, rather an unusual thing." Now probably this little desk was the most prominent feature of the scant furnishing of the inner room, and followed Mr. Webster to Boston, when he transferred himself in August, 1816. In Portsmouth, his professional income had never exceeded $2,000 a year; but, in Boston, he soon reached a lucrative practice. His income could not have been, on an average, much less than $20,000 a year.

Mr. H., having finished his studies at Boscawen, passed on into the office of Daniel Webster, at No. 92 Court street, Boston. At first a student, probably, he became a business associate of Mr. Webster, and was honored (and burdened) with his confidence and the cares of his affairs for many years—say from 1825 to about 1840. Profoundly attached as he was to Mr. Webster's political and personal fortunes, it is yet a tradition among Mr. H.'s descendants that the harassing care of Mr. Webster's private affairs was too great a burden upon his fortitude, and was a main reason for his leaving Boston, when the long business connection between them ceased, although their friendship continued as warm as ever. When parting from Mr. Webster's office, Mr. H. asked the privilege of taking as a memento this desk, associated with so many labors and reminiscences of his great teacher and friend. This request granted, the old desk migrated from one place to another, till it seems to have found rest here.

Mr. Webster early attained what even now would be a large professional income; for that time, an enormous one. Yet there was probably never an hour of his life when he was absolutely free from debt. There is somewhere a letter in which he speaks of Ezekiel and himself, when at home in vacation in their student days, sitting up at night after the family had gone to bed, warming their feet in the oven, sighing over bills due, and cogitating how to get money. This is a perilous experience for youth. Continued long enough, it produces shiftlessness, recklessness, hardness of heart. Ezekiel Webster, who was a more practical man than his brother, learned wisdom from hard experience and is understood to have become a fairly prosperous man. Daniel Webster never was.

Here, in the old desk, in the very pigeon holes which once held the great lawyers' briefs and bills, are 140 of his letters. They are personal, political, and social. Of those personal in character, the larger part refer, among other things, to money to be raised to meet existing obligations. They begin with 1825, when Mr. Webster was in the national House of Representatives. In 1827, he was elected to the Senate.

One of the earliest letters under his frank as United States Senator, is the following:

Dr. Sir,—Since I wrote you this morning I have rec'd y'rs, respecting the indorsement of a note for $750 for Mr. ——. I inclose the indorsement. Y'rs,

D. WEBSTER.

Monday, Mar. 26.

We suppress the name given in full in this letter. It is that of a gentleman then connected with the Boston press, with whom Mr. Webster was, as appears by other letters, so accustomed to exchange indorsements, that sometimes it was not easy to decide whose kite was just now flying.

In the autumn of 1829, it appears from his correspondence that he seriously thought of retiring from public life. But he was married to Miss Le Roy in the early part of December of that year and we hear no more of retirement for the present. But neither in the days of courtship or the honeymoon was he free from vexations about notes to be paid or renewed. Nov. 7 he sends Mr. H. a special power of attorney, authorizing him to indorse any draft payable to himself, drawn out of the Bank of the United States at Washington or its office in Boston or elsewhere, and adds: "A letter will come from Washington, inclosing a draft for $500, and the 150 you must contrive to make up."

Dec. 16, 1829—two or three days after his marriage—he is again in trouble about the identity of a note jointly made by himself and his kite-flying associate of the press.

The following portion of a letter dated New York, Dec. 21, 1829, exhibits the facility with which Mr. Webster and the gentleman alluded to exchanged signatures.

I have your letter respecting the 1000 Doll. note of Mr. ——s. I cannot say whether the debt is mine or Mr. ——s, not having, however, any recollection of any debt of mine for which security was given in that form. I inclose a paper in note form, to be made up into a note for a thousand dollars, or any less sum, to be signed by Mr. ——, in order to get a discount to pay this note, and we will ascertain hereafter, whose debt it is. I am confident it is not mine, but may be mistaken. I have written to him on this matter, saying I should forward an indorsement to you, and saying, also, that if he found it difficult to get a discount, you would help him to some part of the money, as I shall pick up some little fees, and see them to my credit in bank at Boston before 5 Jan.

Perhaps considering his life-long struggle with and about them, it is not surprising that Mr. Webster respectfully spelt "Dollars" with a "big, big D."

So it went on, year after year. In one letter the senator asks if his check for $200, will be good. Here are two more:

Jan. 22, '33.

Dr. Sir: I send to Mr. Frothingham 1000 dols. by this mail. In a few days I hope to send some more. So much has been paid at or removed from the U. S. Bank, I suppose anything remaining may be removed without deduction. At any rate Mr. F. must keep you along, and you must let me know how much I must send, and let it be as little as may be. I am suffering from a cold. I have not been in the Senate to-day. I cannot but be gratified by the vote of the two Houses in the choice of Senator. Y'rs D. W.

The last incident referred to was Mr. Webster's re-election as Senator. Mr. Frothingham was cashier of the branch bank of the United States at Boston, where Mr. Webster kept his account.

Feb. 20. Mr. Frothingham must help you $2,500 more, or else you must get Mr. —— [the journalist] to indorse a note for that sum, and get it discounted.

Yrs, D. WEBSTER.

I send a blank note or two.

In the summer of 1833, Mr. Webster made his famous tour to the West. His speech at Pittsburg was made July 8.

The following letter shows how warm was the feeling he always entertained for his son Fletcher. The letter is found among the files of Mr. H. It perhaps was sent to his care and accidentally left in his custody. The allusion is to Fletcher's approaching graduation at Cambridge.

Pittsburg, July 5, 1833.

My dear Son,—It seems to become doubtful whether I can possibly get home to hear your oration. I regret this, very much indeed, and shall still make every effort in my power to reach Boston in season, but I find so many causes of delay that I cannot say what I may be able to accomplish. I have seldom felt so much concerned about anything of the kind as I do upon your success upon that occasion. I pray you spare no pains. Do your best and you will do well enough. It would be a good thing to have printed, if it should be well received. This part of the matter we can see about. I earnestly remind you of the necessity of acting with great caution in regard to all festivities. You remember what I said to you on that head, and I pray you to forget no part of it. You may ask Mr. H—— for any money which you may have just occasion for. Give my best regards to Mr. Paige's and Mr. White's families. I have not heard from mother and Julia since they arrived at Saratoga.

Ever your affectionate father,

D. WEBSTER.

Young Mr. Webster did not omit to call upon Mr. H. for money for his "just occasions." Here are three notes, each calling for the sum of $10, and another enclosing bills amounting to $142 98.

After graduation Mr. Fletcher seems to have spent some time at Hopkinton, Mass., judging from the following letter:

Hopkinton, March 15, 1835.

Dear Sir,—A person to whom I owe a considerable bill is to leave the town next week, and I promised to pay him before his departure, and I hope you will find it convenient to enable me to keep my promise, so that my credit won't suffer here in Hopkinton, the only place in which it is worth a cent, at present. My board should have been paid some time ago. I do not want to keep the widow from fingering her dos any longer than I can help. I am very sorry to trouble you so often with my little matters, but you are my only source of fiscal existence.

With great respect,
Your ob't servt.,
FLETCHER WEBSTER.

Mr. H. must have had sharp work regulating the Webster system of "fiscal existence."

Here are twenty-one of Mr. Webster's checks—seventeen dated from Nov. 1 to Nov. 20, 1831, amounting in the aggregate to $4,053; two four stray checks of January and February, 1835, amounting in the aggregate to $1,520. All are payable at the office of the bank of the United States in Boston. These checks are very small and cheap looking, although the bank of the United States was supposed, by the Jackson Democrats, to be a terrible creature. Here is a copy of one of them:

[Eagle] Office of the Bank of the United States, Boston, Nov. 28, 1831.
500 Dolls. — cts
Pay to Mr. Paige ——— or bearer, five hundred ——— dollars.
DANL. WEBSTER.

There are notes and acceptances of Mr. Webster's, one note running as follows:

$1100. Boston, Nov 9, 1832.
For value received, I promise George Blake, Esq., to pay him or order, eleven hundred dollars, in four months.
DANL. WEBSTER.

But it was never indorsed by Mr. Blake, and, of course, never used, so that it remains as a souvenir of both and a memento of the life-long struggles of the great man.

It is well known that at different times money was raised and paid to Mr. Webster by voluntary subscription, with the understanding that he would thus be induced to remain in public life. The following is a letter indorsed as from "Abbott Lawrence, Sept. 18, 1835" which, of course refers, to such a scheme:

Boston, Sept. 18, 1835.

Dear Sir,—I am doing all in my power to bring about an arrangement which will relieve one of my friends from a pecuniary pressure. He told me you would furnish me with a list of creditors. Please send me a full statement. I have a part only.

And here is a list by Mr. H. amounting, in the aggregate, to $42,000.

An annuity of $3700 was presented to him in 1846. Other gifts were made to him for specific purposes—that is, to enable him to do certain things. Nobody, we sincerely believe, who appreciates Mr. Webster's character and temper, will conclude that he considered himself under obligations as to control his public conduct. But the very necessity of discussing the question shows how unfortunate for the country, and his own fame, it was, that circumstances should have appeared imperatively to call for such arrangements.

We find a promising young man growing into a successful and able one—finally becoming a great man of the most splendid abilities and capacity for usefulness. And then we find that he was really harassed by debt, from the cradle to the grave—at bed and board, in work and recreation alike, in private and public, in death and life, at the altar or when the loved one's eyes were closed for the last time. There was inevitable moral deterioration, but no conscious corruption.

In the very last years of his life he received great fees. Harvey says, he was paid $15,000 the spring before his death for arguing the India rubber case for Goodyear at Trenton, N. J., and adds, "Mr. Webster never put $1 of the money into his own pocket. He appropriated it to pay his debts, in fact, before it was earned, and I never in my life saw him apparently more delighted than when he received the money." Said he to me: "Three or four more such wind falls as that will let me die a free man and that is all I live to do." Mr. Webster undoubtedly did love to pay debts, and their existence was very grievous to him.

Does anybody ask how it was that Mr. Webster needed so much money, and with his large income and aid from others, did not extricate himself from debt? The answer is to be found in the palsying influence of a state of indebtedness become chronic, and producing shiftlessness and recklessness. The answer to the first query is readily seen in the careless expenditure of a large household, trained in ignorance of small economies—in a liberal hospitality—in the speculations in Boston, Eastern and Western lands, vainly entered into in hope of great gain, and uniformly resulting in loss—in the great farms at Franklin Marshfield and in Illinois—the various establishments in town and country—the want of thrift everywhere. No wonder that Mr. Webster became sick and weary of all this, and in 1835-36-37 and afterward seriously threatened to leave public life. Letters here plainly show he was sincere in his purpose.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

The Journal says: A man who had tramped from Portland, arrived at the Lewiston police station, at half past ten o'clock, Sunday night, in a pitiable condition. He had no coat, and he was practically barefoot—having merely some torn stockings and some rent and torn shoes on his feet. One of his feet was frozen. He said that he rode from Massachusetts to Portland, as far as his money would carry him by rail. He became drunk in Portland, Saturday evening, and fell into the hands of thieves, who robbed him of his coat and boots and threw him into an old shed. He awoke, half-frozen, the next morning, and finding the old pair of worn-out shoes, tied them on his feet, and started for Lewiston at 8 A. M. The janitor and policemen furnished him with boots, socks and overshoes, and food. He remained in the station for the night, and started for the Kennebec, early Monday morning. He says he is a temperance man.

Aroostook.

The Pioneer says that one family Bible constitutes the entire assets of an insolvent Houlton merchant in insolvency.

The Pioneer says: Sponholz, the tailor, of Houlton, is losing confidence in the human race, since he loaned a young man a suit of clothes to be married in. When last heard from, the happy bridegroom was still inside of the clothes and going in the direction of the north pole, presumably in search of the lost Jeannette.

Cumberland.

The Press chronicles the following accidents: A man was badly hurt on Market street, Portland, Monday, by the falling of a piece of ice from the eaves of Centennial Block. William H. Chase was struck by a snowslide yesterday and badly hurt. Mr. W. G. Osborne fell while coming out of his house, struck his shin on the door-scraper, cutting a very bad gash in his leg.

The Press says James H. Ferris, formerly editor and publisher of the "Portland Morning News," was arraigned on an indictment charging him with libel against Rev. Dr. Hill. He pleaded not guilty and recognized for his appearance from day to day in the sum of $1,000—with Neal Dow and Leonard B. Chapman as sureties.

The Press says that, in the case of certain inhabitants of Bridgton vs. the officers of that town and the Bridgton & Saco River Railroad Co., in which, last fall a temporary injunction was granted to restrain the officers from issuing the bonds of the town in aid of that railroad, the bill, at this term of the Supreme Court, in Portland, before Judge Virgin, has been taken pro confesso by consent and a final decree has been entered, in favor of complainants for a perpetual injunction and costs.

The Argus says that Capt. R. Harding, of Yarmouth, has just returned from a three weeks' visit to Halifax where he succeeded in settling the Sarah E Frazier case, (the barque run down and sunk by the steamship Sardinia about two years ago.) The case was settled by the payment to Capt. Harding of $22,000, in full for ship and cargo.

Elisha Thompson's little boy fell and burned his face badly Sunday morning, at Gray.

The Times says W. R. Fields, of Brunswick, has traded with Portland parties, for the well-known trotting mare, Lady Kirk, with a record of 2.23 and when owned by Edward Maynard of Boston, she was considered the fastest mare on the road. She was afterwards owned by the well-known horseman, James Keegan, of Augusta, and still later by Prof. Geo. Rose, of Portland, from whom Mr. Fields obtained her.

The Journal says Mrs. Thomas Fuller, of Augusta, died suddenly, Sunday night. She attended church all day and evening, but on returning home was attacked with apoplexy and died soon after.

The Lewiston Journal says: On Monday, Jan. 16th, Daniel Taylor, of Rome, while working in the saw mill of Daniel Stevens, at Wing's Mills so called, caught his left leg so as to carry him over the main shaft mangling his leg so it was found necessary to amputate below the knee. This unfortunate young man has before had twenty-seven pieces of bone come out of the same leg above the knee, and lost three fingers on his right hand.

According to the Democrat, the lumber operators in Oxford County are doing a good business.

Sagadahoc.

A serious altercation occurred in Bath, Monday morning, between Isaac Edwards, a fireman, of Portland, and David H. Hayes, of St. John, a colored cook of steamer City of Richmond. The particulars are as follows: These, with several others of the crew, mess together, and the two were out late Sunday night. Monday morning some pleasant chaffing took place at their room, when Edwards seized Hayes by the throat, as he says he has done many times before in fun, when Hayes drew back and seized a large butcher knife that lay on the table, and cut him on the left shoulder blade making an ugly wound two inches long, and then with both hands cut him again near the left nipple, four inches long, and again across the bowels, seven inches long, letting out the intestines.

THE GENEVA AWARD.

The Boston Post's Washington special of Tuesday says: Mr. Manning, of Worcester, Mass., argued the claims of the war premium men for the Geneva award balance of $9,000,000. He was followed by Mr. Metcalf, who appears for the exculpated cruisers. There is some hope felt that this long contest will be decided during the present session. The war premium people are hopeful that the decision of this congress will be in their favor. They say that with the exception of the Atlantic company of New York, the insurance people seem to have abandoned their case. They have certainly not had much encouragement of late. The House committee is probably in favor of the war premium men, and will report the bill recognizing the validity of their claims, with a 2 per cent. additional interest on the claims already paid. The hearing before the judiciary committee will continue for two Mondays.

The Journal's special of same date says: Judge Nelson will speak to-morrow, and possibly Mr. Brainard, of New York. Those interested believe that the House Committee will report a bill for the payment of the war premiums, should the Senate Committee on the Judiciary soon report a bill for the relief of the exculpated cruisers. Should this be done the relief of the war premium claimants will be added as an amendment.

THE INSANE HOSPITAL.

ITS MANAGEMENT ENDORSED BY THE TRUSTEES.

In view of the persistent attacks upon the State Insane Hospital, and especially the publication in the Boston Globe, of former letters of Mrs. Quinby, reflecting upon its management, the following extracts from the forthcoming Report of the Trustees, signed in December, 1881, by the entire Board, including Mrs. Quinby, will prove of general interest:

To the Honorable the Governor and the Executive Council of the State of Maine:

The Trustees of the Maine Insane Hospital respectfully submit this, their Forty-First Annual Report.

In doing this, they take pleasure in saying that they believe the Maine Insane Hospital is gradually, year by year, reaching a higher place of usefulness, and more completely accomplishing the high mission for which it was established. This is being effected by the united and faithful efforts of all the officials to promote the best interests of the hospital and the welfare of its inmates; by the many valuable changes and improvements made in the last few years, which have helped to perfect the internal workings of the hospital, and to surround it and the patients with those associations and attractions deemed conducive to their contentment and their recovery, such as have, for the past season, daily elicited expressions of satisfaction from patients, friends and visitors.

This representation is only in unison with that in our last annual report. Favorable as it then was the Trustees soon found that there were impressions or apprehensions existing in the minds of very many, extending even to the friends of patients, that all was not well at the Insane Hospital. Believing then, as they do now, that the Maine Insane Hospital is justly entitled to the confidence of the public and its fostering care, and that the public mind and the friends of those who are now patients, or may be in the near future, might be relieved of all unnecessary anxiety in this direction, the Trustees deemed it advisable to ask the Legislative Hospital Committee, if desirable on their part, to make a full and thorough investigation into all the affairs of the hospital and its general management.

It is well known to the people of this State, and in other States, that such an investigation was made, reaching back over a long series of years, and extending into the very minutia of hospital work, from the efficiency of officers and faithfulness of attendants, to the cure and treatment of its unfortunate inmates. Without going into the details of this investigation, so fresh in the minds of the people, it is sufficient to say, that the Committee, composed of intelligent and impartial men, after a long and patient hearing of all that could be said, both for and against the institution, were able to render such a report, that, in their opinion, not only vindicated it from all suspicions and aspersions but reflected great credit and honor upon all the officials of the hospital for their faithful and valuable services, which should be a source of satisfaction to our State, and to the many friends of four hundred and fifty patients, in the assurance the Committee gave, that their friends have a comfortable home, are kindly watched over and provided with all that may help to restore them to a sound mind, to their homes and to a life of usefulness.

We would, therefore, respectfully refer all those desirous of knowing the condition and workings of the Maine Insane Hospital to the report of the Legislative Hospital Committee of 1881.

The Maine Insane Hospital with its officers, is not the only institution of the kind that has been the object of unfriendly criticism and suspicion. The history of similar institutions is replete with like experiences. This must necessarily be so long as patients, though with fevered brains, perverted reasons and morbid impressions, are yet capable of relating cunningly devised tales of abuse and neglect, too often to find credence in the minds of those unfamiliar with the characteristics of insanity, and so long, too, as dismissed attendants and disaffected spirits can throw into the avenues of public gossip discreditable reports upon honorable transactions and unavoidable circumstances.

* * * * *

ATTENDANTS.

The attendants, with a few exceptions we believe, have been competent and faithful in their care and supervision of the unfortunate ones committed to their charge. Human nature has its frailties. Therefore some of them are found in attendants. Not every young man, or woman, even of the average intelligence possesses the requisite tact or disposition to render him or her suitable for the care of the insane. The lack of either renders him or her unsuitable for the required duties. The possession of both may make his services invaluable to the comfort and happiness of those under his care. The Superintendent endeavors to be watchful over the work and conduct of his attendants, and when, as stated in our last report, they are found incompetent, irregular in conduct or unfaithful in duty, they are immediately dismissed from the service.

* * * * *

CONCLUSION.

In concluding our report, while we can recommend to a generous and charitable public the Maine Insane Hospital for all that it has accomplished and still hopes to do in its increased capacity, for the unfortunate ones of humanity, we would express to the many friends of the four hundred and fifty inmates of the hospital, our assurance that they are provided with a comfortable home, and are receiving that care and treatment essential for their happiness and possible restoration to health.

ADVENTURES OF A SWAN.

His Sudden Flight Through the Hoosac Tunnel.

And His Roamings in The Far West.

Full Account of the Hegira of T. B. Swan, late Proprietor of the Minot Corn Sheller Factory—Law Suit Resulting from His Rascality.

It was in January, 1881, when the world at large heard of the Swan corn-sheller, and when the genius of the inventor of the Excelsior scythe-sharpener became known to the inhabitants of the earth; when the virtues of these aforesaid tools, so "simple, effective and easily operated" and so "indispensable to the successful agriculturist," were dragged from retirement into publicity. It was in January, 1881, that certain detectives of the U. S. postal service made themselves so intrusive concerning the affairs of certain industrial establishments at Mechanic Falls, that the production of corn-shellers and scythe-sharpeners dwindled to zero, and the wheels of an extensive jewelry business became motionless.

It was in January, 1881, that certain persons in Maine and elsewhere, who had invested their funds in Mechanic Falls shoe iron and sand paper, in very inconsiderate and unfeeling terms were heard referring to the proprietors of these industries on the Little Androscoggin. It was a dull morning in January, 1881, when Thomas B. Swan, fusion treasurer of the town of Minot, member of the Maine Legislature for the said town, lawyer, legislator, corn-sheller manufacturer, nursery stock dealer, negotiator of notes, and "friend to the farmers," packed a small valise and shook the snow of Mechanic Falls from his overshoes, ostensibly setting out for the capital. One year has passed since that January morning, and Thos. B. Swan has not arrived at Augusta. The statesman and manufacturer was not seen again at Mechanic Falls, the corn-sheller business languished, and a vacuum was discovered in the treasury of the town of Minot.

A rehearsal of details is needless, as the flight of Swan and the subsequent efforts of detectives to ascertain his whereabouts are fresh in the minds of all our readers. It was currently reported, and believed at one time, that Swan was in Canada. Recent developments show that he never crossed the border. But the last an interested public heard of Swan, was his famous letter to his father-in-law, dated at Toledo, Ohio, a few days after his flight, in which he acknowledged himself a defaulter to the town and a swindler, and a copy of which letter was obtained and printed by the Journal. It has been presumable, however, that Swan has found means of correspondence with his family, in the interim, and that they and their confidants had the secret of his residence, if any he had.

But that which has enabled us to ascertain and make public the history of Swan, since he vanished from the surface, is a deposition made necessary by a law-suit, based upon some of Swan's transactions. One of Swan's failings was his way of giving notes as security for various sums of borrowed money, signed "Thomas B. Swan, Treasurer of the town of Minot," having no authority from the town to issue such notes, but leading the persons who accepted them to believe that they were the town's notes. It is a question of law whether the town is holden for these notes. Mr. John Atkinson, who holds several of Swan's autographs of this nature, has brought suit against the town, through his counsel, Messrs. Geo. C. & Charles E. Wing, of Auburn. The case may be tried at the present term of the Supreme Judicial Court at Auburn. J. M. Libby, Esq., of Mechanic Falls, is counsel for the town. The amount involved is about $1,600. In the preparation of this case it became necessary to have Swan's testimony, and a deposition made by Thomas B. Swan, "commorant," before Hon. A. M. Chadwick, County Judge of Douglas county, Nebraska, dated at Omaha, Nebraska, January 3d, 1882, has been received by the counsel, and will be submitted as evidence in the Court.

This deposition was made in response to a long series of interrogatories made by the counsel for the plaintiff, duly drawn and forwarded to Omaha.

One of Judge Wing's cross-interrogatories, for its comprehensiveness and pertinence, deserves to be quoted in full. It was as follows: "When did you leave Minot, and by what conveyance? where did you stop? by what route did you reach Toledo, Ohio, if you have been there? in what places have you since resided for a time exceeding twenty-four hours? what is your present business, and how have you been employed during the time since you left Minot?"

Swan gives a so interesting and full reply that the public must feel indebted to Judge Wing for his effectual query. The answer to the above question is, in full, as follows: "I left Minot the last of January, 1881, on the Grand Trunk Railway. I first stopped at Toledo, Ohio. I went there over the Hoosac Tunnel Railroad. I have resided in St. Louis, Mo., Fort Worth, Texas, Des Moines, Iowa, Council Bluffs, Iowa, Chariton, Iowa, Omaha, Neb., and Terrell, Texas. I have been selling books till lately. I am now lecturing upon Astronomy, Temperance, Scripture, and noted places in different parts of the world."

In one interrogatory Swan is asked if he was a member of the Maine Legislature and if he was expelled from that body. He answers: "I was a member of the legislature. I don't know whether I was expelled or not. If so, it was because only one side of the case was heard."

In regard to the notes at issue, Swan affirms that Mr. Atkinson asked him if he could recommend a good investment for his money; he told Atkinson he would take the money and give him his own note, and did so, giving Atkinson to understand that it was his personal note, as he intended it. In response to several pertinent questions concerning the kind of blank-notes used, and other transactions, he answers: "I don't remember." Swan adds: "I do not intend to defraud anyone or cheat Mr. Atkinson out of a dollar. I am now making from $7 to $10 per day since I went to lecturing, and if I live five years, I will pay Mr. Atkinson every cent I owe him."

In other interrogatories, Judge Wing asked Swan if he wrote the letter to his father-in-law, (mentioned above) having pasted a printed copy of the document, and also asked if the statements contained therein were the facts, etc. Swan replies in substance: "I wrote a letter to Mr. Hawkes from Toledo, Ohio. I don't remember whether it was like the enclosed or not. I consider the statements therein made, substantially true. I never fraudulently converted a cent of the town's funds to my own use. It should be added that I lost in stock speculation and stock-gambling."

Throughout the whole deposition, Swan clings to the same line of statement that he made in his well known letter from Toledo. The document gives no new light on the transactions in which he figured as Town Treasurer; but its real value is in the brief, but picturesque account of Swan's flight from Maine and his subsequent career, his success in the lecture field, his recent astronomical and ecclesiastical predictions, and his determination to pay 100 cents on a dollar in five years. His hundreds of corn-sheller patrons are kept in the dark as to any recent improvements in mechanism, or whether he has succeeded in introducing his favorite agricultural implement in the West.

Two weeks ago he was at Omaha, and in legal parlance, he was set down as a "commorant," or flitter. It was probable that he was called to another lecture field, after attaching his now patently recognized signature to the deposition above quoted.

The Democratic editor McPherson, of New Jersey, thinks that David Davis will be the man for the Democrats to nominate in 1884. As for General Hancock, Mr. McPherson says: "If he gets the nomination next time, he must write no more tariff letters nor congratulate the Fusionists of Maine." Hancock's congratulation of Plaisted is what McPherson objects to.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM BISHOP McQUAID.

Bishop McQuaid, of Rochester, N. Y., has addressed a letter to Father Stewart, of the same city on the Irish question. The latter had announced that a box would be provided in the church wherein members of his congregation would have an opportunity of depositing contributions in aid and relief of imprisoned agitators of Ireland. Bishop McQuaid's letter says:

"I cannot permit the church to be used for any purpose having a tinge of political action about it, and so I must forbid the method you propose to follow. But the end you wish to attain is a good one, and deserving of help. The same good work has the sympathy and support of priests and bishops in Ireland. The Coercion Bill, under which these men now suffer on bare suspicion without trial, is one that merits strong and determined condemnation, that wins approval from no friend of Ireland in this country. In thus helping these prisoners you are in no way implicated as endorsing false doctrines against the Catholic faith and morals, nor do you incite the poor people of Ireland to a physical contest with Great Britain, which contest would inevitably end in defeat and slaughter. But the man insults me and my pure love for Ireland that asks me to hand her over in this hour of trial and impending danger to the machinations and conspiracies of secret and oathbound societies, to sanction doings condemned by the commandments of the good, or to approve of a plan of action reprobated by every Bishop of Ireland, and leading surely and swiftly to unmitigated communism."

Dr. Lewis A. Sayre holds the opinion that revaccination every five years up to the age of twenty-one is necessary to secure immunity, and should be made compulsory. He asserts that one-half of those vaccinated in infancy are susceptible to infection until reaching the age of thirty, although the disease is not likely to assume a malignant form. Up to about thirty years the susceptibility to the contagion increases, and apparently in regular proportion. After that there is a continuous decline in the liability to contract the disease.

The Supreme Court of the United States decides that registered bonds and stocks of one State may be constitutionally taxed in another. Whether State bonds are taxed or are expressly exempt from taxation at home, the fact in either case, the Court holds, does not prevent them from being taxed elsewhere, for the reason that no State can exempt property from taxation out of its own jurisdiction.

LEARNING ENGLISH. Napoleon I., at St. Helena, gave himself to the study of the language, and wrote to Las Casas the following letter: "Since sixt week I learn the English, and I do not any progress. 6 week do fourty and two day, if I might have earn 50 word for day, I could know it two thousands and 2 hundred. It is in the dictionary more of fourty thousand, even if he could, must 20 but much often for know it or 120 week, which do more 2 years. After this you shall agree that to study one tongue is a great labor, who must do into the young aged."—Detroit Free Press.

A THRIFTY EGOTIST. We doubt if there are any persons in America who take Mr. Oscar Wilde's present venture seriously. If there be such, they should be told that he is a young gentleman of excellent parentage, liberal education, and good parts, who is willing to accept the financial rewards of an absurd notoriety rather than of a legitimate reputation; who is traveling in this country under the management of the same agent that runs the comic opera in which he is supposed to be burlesqued; and who may be said to successfully "represent" nothing under the heavens save an exceedingly thrifty egotism. Is it not preposterous that such a man should go anywhere—even to the jungles of South Africa—to preach a gospel of "great taste?"—The Critic.

Despatch From St. Petersburg.

Washington Jan 18 Secretary Frelinghuysen has received despatches from Hoffman U S Charge de Affaires at St Petersburg reporting the action of the Russian authorities in aid of the survivors of the Jeannette On receipt of the President's orders to make provision for the payment of the expenses of maintaining the rescued men and sending them to the United States Hoffman had a conference with Gen Ignatieff who showed very deep interest in the fate of the crew He had already telegraphed the Siberian authorities to furnish the men with money if required and supplies of every kind, and place the Imperial telegraph at their disposal Active measures had also been taken for searching for the crew

Mr Bennet had put 6000 roubles in Gen Ignatieff's hands, but the General observed that no such provision was immediately necessary as the Russian Government is making all proper disbursements through the local authorities Hoffman had made a formal communication to the Russian foreign office of the President's telegram of the 20th of December, conveying the thanks of the United States Government to all concerned in the rescue or relief of the crew of the Jeannette.

SCOVILLE STILL TALKING.

HE ARRAIGNS THE STALWARTS

As Being Responsible for the Crime.

Continuation of Mr Scoville's Argument.

WASHINGTON, Jan 18 Many persons prominent in political and in social life were among the audience that packed the court room this morning Guiteau came in with a quick, confident manner and saluted his friends in passing. As he took his seat he turned to Judge Cox and said "I presume Your Honor, will allow me to address the jury when Scoville gets through"

Judge Cox— We will consider that when Scoville gets through"

Scoville in reply to an inquiry this morning stated that he hardly expected to conclude his speech to day.

At 10 10 A M Scoville resumed his argument taking up and discussing the statistics of insane criminals which had been introduced in evidence by the prosecution This evidence, Scoville said, was of the greatest benefit to the defence and afforded instances of delusion and chimerical mania precisely such as he claimed had affected the prisoner. An exactly similar case in all its parts he thought had never existed He did not think the world had ever seen or ever would see a second Guiteau Insane people were peculiar and as erratic as meteors except in the latter having an orbit peculiar to itself He had noticed that the tables produced here by Dr Gray omitted some essential features of the reports.

Col Corkhill— Dr Gray didn't prepare any tables especially for the trial

Scoville— Dr Gray was hired to come here to help hang this man He was one of the conspirators in the conspiracy of which the District Attorney was the chief but fortunately he has left his footprints here and before I get through I can contradict him out of his own mouth"

Mr Scoville reviewed and analyzed the definition given by Dr Gray of delusions, insane delusions and mania and endeavored to make the points in the conduct of Guiteau parallels to the illustrations given by Dr Gray against the assertion of some of the experts that Guiteau had been playing a part or feigning insanity

Scoville contended that the prisoner had pursued the very opposite course He had said and done much to prejudice the theory of insanity If he had been sane and playing insanity he would not have done it When anything strikes him as wrong he says so at once and here is the secret of his just denunciations of the District Attorney, the man who introduced spies into his cell to obtain his secrets and if possible to hang him but thank God they never obtained one item of evidence which would operate against him Yourselves, gentlemen of the jury have seen how this honorable District Attorney has wickedly suppressed and destroyed evidence that would have aided the prisoner

Guiteau— That last is meant for sarcasm"

Scoville then adverted to the cross examination of the prisoner by Porter and his wonderful quickness in reply his memory and his intellectual acumen as remarked by every one at the time This smartness of the prisoner was due to his quick perception It stops right there He cannot take two consecutive steps in reasoning That is the inability that has has prevented him from doing anything in life successfully Discussing the horrors of the crimes often the acts of insane criminals, Scoville said There is nothing in the act to compare with some of these insane acts of insane criminals, and gentlemen of the jury in my opinion if there were not reasons and powerful ones

Back of This Prosecution

this prisoner never would have been brought to trial but I tell you gentlemen of the jury back of this prosecution is an influence which I have felt and which you may feel gentlemen before this trial is concluded There are politicians who seek to hide their own shame behind the disgrace of this poor prisoner and make him a scape goat for their crime I did not intend, gentlemen of the jury to take up this feature of the case but when I find the power and influence of this Government used against me in denying the small pittance that I have asked for—a fair and impartial trial and the small facilities needed for a proper defence I do not propose to keep quiet I say that such men as Grant and Conkling and Arthur are responsible for his crime Conkling shall not escape, shall not shirk the responsibility for the state of things that led to this act and he shall not escape the condemnation of the American people if I can help it to his share in this disgraceful scramble for office this scramble that led to a conflict with the chosen ruler of this great Nation and led this poor insane man to do as what they would have hailed with an action as would probably hundreds of other politicians, if it could occur other than through assassination—the removal of Garfield who stood in the way of their unrighteous and disgraceful struggle for office Neither shall Grant escape that condemnation to which he is so justly subject for coming from Mexico and to throw his own name into this petty quarrel about a small office in the Republican party and seek to foment the differences that had sprung up I am not going to see the misdeeds of these men high in power visited upon the head of this poor insane man if I can help it This clamor for his blood is not for the purpose of avenging Garfield or satisfying justice but their theory is this, If I can be shown that this was the act of a sane man then those politicians in high places will say, of course we are not responsible for the act of a sane man To be sure we had differences but these could never have led a sane man to such an act; but on the contrary gentlemen of the jury, what is the effect of your verdict If you acquit him as an insane man? Why, people will see then who is at fault They will fix the blame upon the heads and hearts of those who waged war upon our dead President until it drove this poor insane man from reading daily in the papers what Grant says, what Conkling says and from consequent brooding upon it, to his insane act of killing the President, and these are the men in high places that are the culpable ones who will go down to posterity with a stigma upon their names, and the detestation of their countrymen fastened upon their memories" [illegible]

Recess was then taken

A Sensation in Court

Scoville's denunciation of Conkling and Arthur created a profound sensation in the court room. As soon as recess was announced Scoville was surrounded by ladies and gentlemen and congratulated upon his "fearless exposition." One gentleman exclaimed, "that's the correct sentiment and four fifths of the American people are behind you on that."

The recess hour was enlivened by several heated discussions in the corridors and upon the outside on the general question of moral and legal responsibility as set forth by Scoville.

During recess Scoville received the following telegram

NEW YORK, Jan 18.

Mr Scoville, Attorney for Guiteau

The New York Court of Appeals have just decided that the prosecution, where some evidence of insanity is produced for the defence, must make out a case of sanity beyond a reasonable doubt

The counsel for the defence will call attention to this latest decision and ask Judge Cox to charge the jury to that effect

Scoville discussed the conduct and action of Guiteau at the time and immediately after the shooting, and contended they were entirely in keeping with the theory of insanity; that his coolness, his quietly going to bed and peacefully sleeping the night after the murder were characteristic incidents that the crime was such as would be expected from insane men and only insane men.

Guiteau called out, "I have never had any conception of his removal as murder; my mind is perfectly blank on the question."

Scoville read from the evidence of Gen. Reynolds what Guiteau had said to him (Reynolds) in jail, That when his reasons were known to the people they would acquit him without trial and he should then go to Europe for a year or two."

Guiteau "All I have got to say about that is I never said it."

Scoville continuing said, "This not evidence manufactured by the defence; this evidence was offered by the prosecution. What the prisoner said to Reynolds was said under the belief he was talking to a friend and he had no reason to manufacture evidence then.

Guiteau—"It was not manufactured, it was never said"

Scoville continued, "And this, gentlemen, is the evidence offered you by the prosecution I want you to take into consideration the monstrous absurdity of such a proposition coming from a sane man, as they would have you believe he is, that he could kill the President of the United States and then by simply giving his reasons could go free without trial"

Scoville alluded to Guiteau's remark when told by Reynolds that Arthur and Conkling and other stalwarts detested him and abhorred his crime.

Guiteau interrupted saying, "I did not say any such thing when he spoke of Conkling and Arthur on the Fourth of July Those men are my friends to-day and don't you forget it."

Scoville continued with a review of the evidence and called attention to various incidents in Guiteau's life, arguing his insanity as evidenced by the undoubted lack of something in his mental composition

Guiteau called out sarcastically "Give them that fog story, it cost Corkhill $200 to get it here"

Scoville continued to speak till 3 P M, when the Court adjourned till to-morrow. He will probably occupy a greater part of another day

Governor Cornell on the Recent Disaster.

ALBANY Jan. 18 The Governor sent a message to the Senate to-day relative to the late railroad disaster, in which he says The tragic fate of your late associate and the fact that the lives of many members of both branches of this legislature were imperilled are calculated to impress on your minds with peculiar force the vital, urgent need of a prompt consideration of the subject of railroad disasters and the means to prevent them That an accident like this could occur on the chief railway of this State and within the limits of the great metropolis, demonstrates most painfully the importance of some careful statutory provisions with adequate penalties to enforce obedience and responsibility in all necessary precautions for the conduct of railroad trains These should be required by law to be supplied with all available appliances for breaking into wrecked cars and for the extinguishment of fire

DANIEL WEBSTER.

100th Anniversary of His Birth.

CONCORD N H, Jan 18 The one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Daniel Webster was celebrated in this city to-day in the Opera House The audience which was large included many prominent citizens from all parts of the State. The principal address was delivered by Col John H George of this city.

At Salisbury

the birthplace of Webster a special commemorative service was held in the old church where his parents worshipped, one hundred years ago Deacon Little presided and called to the platform several of the oldest citizens, who were previously acquainted with the distinguished jurist A nte was read from the church register written in the hand of Rev Thomas Worcester, long time pastor of the church The disputed point as to Webster's church connections was settled beyond a doubt by entry under the date of September 13th 1817, that on that date Daniel Webster united with the Congregational Church of Salisbury, N H

His Marriage

Under date of May 29 1808, is recorded the marriage of Daniel Webster Esq, with Miss Grace Fletcher of Hopkinton The house in which the marriage occurred is now standing in good condition near the village church Letters written by Webster to friends in Salisbury were read, also his confession of faith written to Mr Worcester in 1808 Many interesting incidents of his early life were recited and after other remarks and music the meeting dissolved

At Phillips Academy

At Exeter, Phillips Academy, of which Webster was an alumnus, interesting exercises were held Addresses were delivered by Prof Perkins and members of the academy

Special exercises were also held at Portsmouth, to-day, in commemoration of the anniversary of Webster's birth The programme embraced original historical papers relating to the distinguished statesman, his settlement in Portsmouth, and incidents in his public career interspersed with selected orations and recitations from his writings

At Washington

WASHINGTON Jan 18 A meeting was held here to night to celebrate the centennial of the anniversary of the birth day of Daniel Webster and to arrange for procuring a suitable monument which it is proposed to erect in this city to commemorate the fame of the dead statesman Hon Geo B Loring presided and short addresses were made by the Chairman, Senator Blair ex Speaker Randall, Representative Hutchins and others

Commissioner Loring was then empowered to appoint a committee of seven to prepare a monument the necessary fund for the purpose having been already obtained.

President Arthur and ex Secretary Blaine who had been invited to attend sent letters which were read expressing regret at their inability to be present and giving assurances of their cordial endorsement of the objects of the meeting

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

A MAN KILLS HIS MOTHER, WIFE AND TWO CHILDREN,

And then Hangs Himself.

LANCASTER, Ky, Jan. 18 News reached here this morning that James R Wilmot a farmer living near Lancaster, had murdered his wife, mother and two daughters The coroner to-day found the still untouched lifeless body of Wilmot hanging in his barn The bodies of Elizabeth Wilmot, his mother, aged eighty-nine, and Mattie and Mary Wilmot, his daughters, aged about 19 and 15, were lying in their beds with awful cuts across the neck and breast of each, made by blows from a sharp new axe found lying on the floor of the room The body of Elizabeth Wilmot, his wife, was found face downward on the floor with three of four horrible gashes in the head and back made by the same axe

The Inquest

At the inquest Miss Alice Colvin, who was sleeping in her room up stairs, testified that about five this forenoon she was aroused by a noise below and going down met Wilmot coming out of the room where her mother slept. He had an axe in his hand He told her he had killed the whole family and was going to kill himself Horror stricken the girl rushed away.

Just as she was leaving, a son, James J, about twenty years old, came down stairs in his night clothes He testified that as he reached the foot of the stairs he came in contact with his father who had a gun in his hand. He asked his father what he was doing, and he replied he was going to kill himself and would kill him too. His father grappled with him and threw him down, but was unable to hold him. The old man then rose and grabbed the gun and aimed to shoot but the son knocked the gun up and the ball went into the ceiling.

The young man then broke loose and ran for his life, the old man following, but he soon turned toward the barn, where he hung himself For some time past Wilmot had been brooding over a security debt of $450, which he had to pay for his brother-in-law, and this it is believed drove him crazy

Although he was in comfortable circumstances and worth $9000 he recently expressed fears of death from starvation. He was about fifty years old, and was an honest, upright, economical business man. He was kind and affectionate to his family and to his old mother he was a most devoted son.

A BAPTIST MINISTER'S EXPERIENCE.

I am a Baptist Minister, and before I even thought of being a clergyman, I graduated in medicine, but left a lucrative practice for my present profession 40 years ago. I was for many years a sufferer from quinsy, Thomas' Electric Oil cured me." I was also troubled with hoarseness, and Thomas' Eclectric Oil always relieved me. My wife and child had diphtheria and "Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured them," and if taken in time will cure seven times out of ten. I am confident it is a cure for the most obstinate cold or cough, and if any one will take a small teaspoon and a half fill it with the Oil, and then place the end of the spoon in one nostril and draw the Oil out of the spoon into the head by sniffing as hard as they can, until the Oil falls over into the throat and practice that twice a week, I don't care how offensive their head may be, it will clean it out and cure their catarrh. For deafness and earache it has done wonders to my certain knowledge. It is the only medicine dubbed patent medicines that I have ever felt like recommending, and I am very anxious to see it in every place, for I tell you that I would not be without it in my house for any consideration. I am now suffering with a pain like rheumatism in my right limb, and nothing relieves me like Thomas' Eclectric Oil. DR. E. F. CRANE, Corry, Pa.

BUCKING THE LOCOMOTIVE As the afternoon train from Portland, on the Maine Central came around a curve near Lewiston the engineer saw a few rods ahead a man standing a few inches off the railway track, and making grimaces at the approaching locomotive The engineer reversed his engine, whistled 'down brakes" and tried to stop the train, but time and distance were too brief The engine struck the man and he rolled down the bank. The engineer thought he was killed, but upon looking back he saw the fellow dancing about and shaking his fists in a very lively manner The engineer says the fellow is apparently half witted and has made a practice of crossing the track at that point, daily at train time He never tried at bucking the locomotive before, however and it is not probable that he will again

FROM PITTSFIELD.

The M. C Institute

Our correspondent B" writes On Thursday last, the citizens of Pittsfield met at Lancey's Hall to see what steps could be taken toward lifting the debt on the M C Institute The debt on the institution was announced to be $17,000. The former principal of the school, Prof. Bachelder, had previously proposed to the citizens that if they would raise $10,000 in Pittsfield he would raise an equal amount outside. It was agreed by all present to make an effort to meet the proposal of Prof. Bachelder, and a committee was chosen to solicit pledges Most of the money will have to come from the business men of our village many of whom are comparatively young and by no means wealthy will draw very heavily upon them to raise the amount, but most of them evince a determination to do it rather than lose a school which brings into Pittsfield $20 000 annually The committee are to meet at G A Farwell's office on Saturday evening and report progress. It will be a sad blow to the commercial interests of Pittsfield if the school goes down. Many of our merchants say it will nearly ruin them either to lose the school or to advance enough to save it.

OTHER MATTERS

The thermometer indicated 28° below zero Wednesday morning in some localities.

The sleighing is good and lumber and wood are beginning to come into the village in large quantities.

A D McMaster has been elected a member of the board of trustees of M C Institute

A man travelling about collecting $3 each on patent hay racks, has disturbed the "peace of mind" of many of our townsmen.

The Universalists are to have a supper and dance on the evening of the 19th, at Lancey's Hall.

Union religious service have been held in Pittsfield every night for about three weeks. A deep and growing interest is manifested.

BRIGHTON LIVE STOCK MARKET.

The American Cultivator says the receipt of live stock at the Brighton market for the year 1881 makes a good comparison with the figures of other years, although in point of numbers there is a slight falling off in cattle, as shown by the figures of the previous year. The receipts of 1881 were 204,924 head, against 227,484 in 1880, and 183,586 in 1879. The statistics of the market go back nine years, to 1872, when the receipts were 157,366. From that date there has been a steady gain, showing that New England is making an increased demand upon the farmer for those products which go to nourish and sustain our active and increasing population. Of sheep the receipts were 506,828 [illegible] 513, fat hogs 701,831, and pigs 7066. This shows an increase of 39,779 head of sheep, 6763 veal calves and 1230 pigs. Of fat hogs there was a falling off of 9985. The receipts of horses amount to 7422 head, nearly all of which went direct to the Boston market.

The prices of cattle have not materially differed from those of last year, excepting that the best premium bullocks sold about half a cent higher. Western hogs sold at an advance of one cent per pound. Otherwise we notice very little variation in the market as we glance over the figures of the previous year, although there is much to be thankful for and much to encourage the stock grower in the future. The [illegible] consuming demand of our country keeps ahead of the food-producing capacity of the agricultural regions, and so long as this holds good the farmer can look forward to encouraging times. He only needs to make hay while the sun shines, and to guard against rainy days by striving to increase the quality of his product. It is an encouraging fact that he has an eye out in that direction, and that each year he is exerting himself to learn the demands that are being made upon him by trying to improve not only the quality of his stock, but to breed that class of animals that are capable of returning to him the greatest profit. He is no longer satisfied to turn off yearly that class of coarse and raw boned animals that were too common twenty or thirty years ago. The Brighton market furnishes food for thought and in it there are each week many suggestions for the future [illegible] for what has been done.

The sources of our great meat supply are worth considering, as showing who [illegible] the most benefit from our New England consumption. In looking over the figures we see that Massachusetts sent to the Brighton market last year 2133 head of [illegible], Maine, 13,523, New Hampshire, [illegible], Vermont, 11,718, Rhode Island and Connecticut, 207, New York 2073, Canada, [illegible], and the West 167,131. From these figures it will be seen that all New England, New York and Canada sent to us only 37,707 head. With the vast breadth of country, cheap farms and fertility of soil combined with low rates of transportation, the West will continue to give to our great cattle market its chief supply. Of sheep Maine sent us [illegible] head, New Hampshire 40,451, Vermont, 97,199, Massachusetts 9260, New York 15,159, Canada [illegible], and the West, 219,268, the latter not quite half the whole amount.

The routes by which the live stock come to market furnish some interesting figures. The Boston & Albany brought the greatest number, [illegible] cattle and 197,810 sheep. The Fitchburg Railroad next with [illegible] cattle, 102,123 sheep. The Eastern Railroad 12,523 cattle and 5,563 sheep, Lowell Railroad, 11,213 cattle, and 13,255 sheep, New York & New England, 117 cattle and [illegible] sheep, Old Colony, 217 cattle. Boston & Maine, 90 cattle, 182 sheep, on foot and by boat, 1430 cattle.

The [illegible] of live stock and dressed meat from this country is of recent origin, dating back only a few years. In this Boston takes the lead of even New York, exporting a number of quarters of dressed beef and carcasses of mutton. The totals for 1881 are as follows: From Portland there were sent 2067 cattle, [illegible] sheep and [illegible] quarters of beef; Boston, 54,61[illegible] cattle, [illegible] sheep, 130,017 quarters of beef, [illegible] carcasses of beef and 495 dressed hogs. New York 40,07[illegible] cattle, 9187 sheep, 259,63[illegible] quarters of beef, 71,837 carcasses of mutton and 16,131 dressed hogs. Baltimore shipped 3245 cattle and Chicago, via Montreal, [illegible] 132 quarters of dressed beef.

The total clearances from the United States for the last year were 102,575 head of cattle, 48,115 sheep, [illegible]73,6[illegible] quarters of dressed beef, 81,150 carcasses of mutton and 16,6[illegible] dressed hogs. Canada shipped to Europe in the same time 55,240 head of cattle, 72,387 sheep and 35,432 quarters of beef.

There is no question but the shipment of live stock and dressed meat from the United States to England has only just begun. The capacity of this country to produce and the improved methods of shipping which are found to come as we gain experience, will put a quantity of meat upon the English market, and at prices that will defy competition. Altogether there is an encouraging outlook for the American stock grower, and as to our friends across the water they must take care of themselves.

ASSIGNEES' SALE

—OF—

Dirigo Slate Quarry.

Pursuant to order of the Insolvent Court for Cumberland County, State of Maine, the undersigned assignees of the will sell at public auction, at the auction room of F. O. Bailey & Co., No. 18 Exchange Street, Portland, Maine, on FRIDAY, the third (3d) day of March, A. D. 1882, at two (2) o'clock P. M., all the real estate of the Dirigo Slate Quarry Company, in the town of Monson, County of Piscataquis, State of Maine, embracing the WELL KNOWN AND VALUABLE SLATE QUARRY of said Company, also ALL BUILDINGS, FIXTURES, IMPROVEMENTS, TOOLS, AND ALL OTHER PERSONAL PROPERTY whatever belonging to said assignees, in and about said real estate and quarry, and at the railroad station at Abbot.

All said property, both real and personal, will be sold in one parcel, subject to taxes for the current year amounting to fifty-one, seventy-five one hundredths ($51.75-100) dollars, and to a mortgage payable July 5th, A. D. 1884, for seventy five hundred dollars and interest from July 5th, A. D. 1881, at six per cent per annum, payable semi annually.

Sale will be positive, and to the highest bidder. Terms, ten (10) per cent. cash at sale, payable to the auctioneer, and balance ten (10) days after sale, payable at the office of W. L. Putnam, in said Portland.

Among the appurtenances of the Quarry, included in this sale, are two derricks, seven lines of 18 inch guage railroad, boiler and appurtenances, engine and appurtenances, blacksmith shop with contents and appurtenances, two steam drilling machines and appurtenances, slate saw and appurtenances and a complete variety and supply of tools and materials for the operation of said Quarry.

The real estate is the same as that conveyed to said Company by George A. Mathews and Henry E. Homer, by deeds dated August 3, A. D. 1878, March 18, A. D. 1878, June 19, A. D. 1878, and May 17, A. D. 1879, recorded in Piscataquis County Registry of Deeds, vol. 64, pp. [illegible], vol 69, p. 122, and vol. 74, p. 523.

Fuller information and a detailed list of the property believed to be on hand, appertaining to the Quarry and included in the sale, may be had upon application to F. O. Bailey & Co.

The assignees will give, neither by this notice of sale, nor by the list of property, nor by their deed, any warranty, express or implied; and purchasers before bidding must satisfy themselves that all statements of title, property on hand and of value or condition are correct, and will be required to complete the purchase upon the understanding that such notice and list are only statements of the belief of the assignees as to the matters which they contain, and nothing more.

An Interesting Story—A Hopeless Case Cured.—A Good Reason for Happiness.

Statement of Mr. Washington Monroe, of Catskill, Green County, New York.

"For many years I had suffered from a complaint which the physicians called Gravel. I had employed some of the most noted doctors without obtaining any permanent relief, and for a long time my case was regarded as hopeless. Finally, knowing the circumstances said I must die. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy which she had somewhere heard of or seen advertised. Without the slightest faith in it but solely to gratify her, I bought a bottle of a druggist in our village. I used that and two or three bottles more, and—to make a long story short—I am now as healthy a man as there is in the country.

"Since then I have recommended 'Favorite Remedy' to others whom I knew to have suffered from Kidney and Liver complaints, and I assure the public that the Favorite Remedy has done its work with similar completeness in every single instance and I trust some other sick and discouraged mortal may hear of this and try the Favorite remedy as I did."
